ENIAC × MAGIST | CASE STUDY

Should Eniac enter Brazil through Magist?

What Magist's data says about tech sales, prices and deliveries

Data: April 2017 to March 2018

slidesmania.com

Our findings tell us that it’s a bad idea

01 Magist is not good fit for high-end tech

02 Magist deliveries are not fast enough

All figures: April 2017 to March 2018, the same 12 months as Eniac's own data.

01 A What is tech?

slidesmania.com

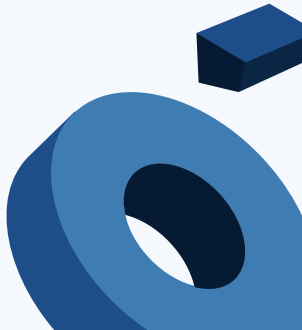

Tech means 10 product categories

Product names were not included in the database. A judgement call was made on the classification of tech categories.

Watches are included to capture smart watches, although the category may hold mostly regular watches.

Ambiguous categories excluded: fixed_telephony, signaling_and_security, toys, all appliances.

Our Conclusion

slidesmania.com

Do not partner with Magist. The risks outweigh the rewards.

Question	What we found	What it means for Eniac
High-end fit	Eniac's €540 average item price is higher than 95% of products on Magist	Magist buyers shop for cheap tech, not premium Apple products
Delivery speed	14 days on average; 16% late in Black Friday week, 20% in March 2018	Eniac's busiest sales weeks would be Magist's slowest
Reviews	Late orders average 2.2 stars vs 4.2 on time; 56% of late orders get 1 star	Late deliveries would become bad reviews for Eniac
Product trust	Buyers report fake and wrong Apple products	Eniac's genuine products would sit next to fakes
Earnings	All Magist tech sellers make €153k a month combined	Even if Eniac won every tech sale on Magist, it would add only 13%. Realistically, far less.
